LOUIS, MO (KPLR) – Several hundred protesters gathered at the City of Saint Louis police headquarters Thursday, March 23rd and marched to the Mayor’s office, and then to the U.S. Postal Service. They were demanding that the mayor release internal police department reports on the shooting death of a black man by a white police officer last year. A grand jury declined to indict the officer, Darren Wilson, in that case. The two protesters who have led a string of marches since the shooting were handcuffed and arrested. One of the protesters, Chris Brown, who called for Ferguson Police Chief Thomas Jackson’s resignation in November, said it was too soon to celebrate the grand jury’s decision not to indict Wilson, which was issued this week. “We are still living with a system that allows one person to beat another to death,” he said. “It is hard to celebrate when you lose a close friend.” Law enforcement officials have said Wilson and Brown had a physical fight before Wilson fired eight times, killing Brown. Brown’s mother and father said in emotional interviews with CNN’s Anderson Cooper that they believed Wilson, who is white, intentionally killed their son. “We don’t want to celebrate the funeral of a child who has lost his life,” Darren Wilson’s father, Larry Wilson, said. “We want to be able to go to the funeral and be able to have a good cry with the rest of the family, to mourn with them.” Larry Wilson also said he planned to visit Ferguson to check on his son, and meet with local residents f988f36e3a
